PREFACE.

THE present work is founded upon that of Velazquez, which has for so many years served as a standard, and has formed the basis of the only Spanish and English dictionary of any pretensions issued since the year 1852. The purpose of the present editor has been to recast, to modify, and especially to modernize the material found in the treatise of Velazquez. In carrying out this plan eight thousand new titles have been added in Part I. alone, and in addition several hundred idioms, in which the Castilian is so peculiarly rich. Some of these will be found under the verbs DAR, ECHAR, and TOMAR, for example. The need of explication of these idioms is evidenced by the full treatment of them in the twelfth edition of the Dictionary of the Spanish Academy, and by the publication in Boston of a special volume upon "Spanish Idioms." In adding new entries it has been sought to make them practical; the vocabulary of commercial and of needful scientific terms has therefore been increased. Proper names are recorded in the Appendix; the adjectives derived from them will be found in the body of the text. To gain room for the new entries a portion of the obsolete matter has been dropped; in particular many augmentatives, and regular diminutives in -ITO, -ICO, -ILLO, -CILLO, and -ZUELO have not been specifically recorded, unless perchance they possessed a special meaning. The bulk of the Spanish-English part remains, however, nearly the same by reason of the change in typography, whereby the page is enlarged and the title-words occupy less room.

For the first time in such a work CH has been separated from C, and the Castilian alphabet exactly followed. For the first time, also, the syllabication of Spanish words has been given according to the rules of that language, and not the caprice of the editor. The pronunciation has thus acquired greater exactitude and harmony. Equivalent signs for pronunciation have been of great moment in Part II. (English-Spanish), and the signs for these have been thoroughly revised and adapted to the nomenclature adopted by the American and the British Philological Associations. Part II., indeed, was so antiquated as to require re-writing, and the reader is referred to the special preface for it.

The curious reader is referred to the words CANAL, COCO, PEZ, POR, PUNTO, and the verbs TOMAR and PONER, as illustrative examples of the character of the present revision. Let the instructor compare any three successive pages of the present treatise with the same pages in any other like dictionary, and the scope and style of the revision will be clear. To select one region only, a good deal of new matter may be found in the letter M.

The editor has not hesitated to write many letters of inquiry as to the special value and acceptation of Spanish words, and to consult personally also native Spaniards and Spanish-Americans. It has been his aim to secure accuracy at whatever cost. But it has been found impracticable to change all the Linnæan names of plants and animals to the most modern equivalents. The men of science will pardon this shortcoming in a popular treatise. The botanical and zoölogical terms have frequently given much trouble to interpret aright.

The editor wishes to acknowledge indebtedness to his friend, E. L. Williams, of Santa Cruz, Cal.; to Dr. E. Calderón, of San Francisco; to Prof. Carlos Bransby, of Los Angeles; to the publishers for their pains in securing a page pleasurable to the eye; to the Library of the University of California; and, above all, to his correspondent, Juan L. Iribas, of Hartford, Conn., for suggestions and the heavy labour of proof-reading.

Lastly, the editor makes his own the concluding paragraph of the preface written by Velazquez. It will be highly gratifying if his efforts shall in any way contribute to a mutual good understanding between the peoples who speak the two languages most widely spread over the earth.

EDWARD GRAY.

BERKELEY, CALIFORNIA, December, 1899.

EXTRACT FROM THE ORIGINAL PREFACE.

So FAR from wishing to detract in the least from the works of his predecessors, the editor is willing frankly to confess, that without their labours he should never, perhaps, have undertaken the task of the present publication; and he considers it but just to say to them, in the words of the Spanish fabulist, Iriarte—

“Gracias al que nos trajo las gallinas.”—FAB. xii. ♦

There are undoubtedly faults in the Spanish and English dictionaries that have preceded the present work, but it is also true that they embody many excellencies: the compiler has endeavoured to avail himself of the latter, while at the same time he has carefully corrected the former.

A dictionary of two languages cannot be perfect unless it contain an exact and rigorous translation of the words, unencumbered by useless definitions. The most common idioms and phrases that are current in good society should also be incorporated, and even some of those which may be properly classed as vulgar, when they serve to elucidate the peculiar customs and usages of a country. To these should be added the corresponding signification of words in the mercantile vocabulary, as well as of the terms in most frequent use in the arts and sciences.

These latter classes of words are extremely various, particularly in those new republics of America which were formerly Spanish possessions. Many words are there in use which are not known in the Peninsula. For example: the TURKEY, which in Spain is known as el pavo or pavito, in Mexico is called el guajolote, in Cuba el guanajo—a word which is also there used figuratively, in allusion to the qualities of this fowl, to denote a stupid or half-witted person—and in some parts of South America it is termed el chumpipe or chinquique. The SWEET POTATO is called in Spain la patata dulce; in Mexico, el camote; in Cuba, el boniato, buniato, or moniato. A TWIN, in Europe, is gemelo or mellizo; but in Cuba it is jimagua; in some parts of South America, morrocho; and in Mexico, familiarly, cuate. In allusion to this latter term it is often said, Eso no tiene cuate, instead of Eso no tiene igual.

In preparing the present work, besides the dictionaries of BARETTI, NEUMAN, CONNELLY, and particularly that of Dr. DON MATEO SEOANE, the editor has consulted the last edition of the Diccionario de la Academia Española, as well as the dictionaries of SALVÁ and TERREROS; the treatise on Etimologías Castellanas by CABRERA, and on Las Voces Cubanas by PICHARDO. In the English part he has taken for his guides the well-known dictionaries of WEBSTER and WORCESTER, and in some cases the treatise on Americanisms by BARTLETT. “La Guía Mercantil de Madrid” has supplied him with the names of many articles of commerce, to which he has added a long catalogue, obtained by careful examination of the “Price-currents” of Cadiz, Vera Cruz, Havana, and New Orleans, besides an excellent collection generously furnished him by his esteemed friend, ALEXANDER I. COTHEAL, Esq., a merchant of this city, well known for his extensive erudition, particularly in languages. He ought also to make mention of Mr. JOHN L. JEWETT, who, besides correcting many of the articles, and furnishing various additions, has carefully revised the whole work.

The last revised and enlarged edition of the dictionary of DON MATEO SEOANE has been made the basis of the present work. For the orthography and prosody of SEOANE, however, which are now almost entirely disused, the editor has substituted the new and improved orthography and prosody of the last edition of the Dictionary of the Academy. He has also added to SEOANE'S work more than EIGHT THOUSAND articles, including words, idioms, and proverbs. Many of the definitions of SEOANE he could not do less than retrench, especially in cases like the following: BEBER, To drink, to swallow any liquid. He certainly could not imagine that any person speaking the English language, and wishing to consult a Spanish and English dictionary, could need a definition in his own language of the simple verb to drink. He has also corrected many of SEOANE'S definitions, as in the following examples: FROCK-COAT, Especie de casaca muy ajustada al cuerpo, instead of Levita. CROSS-LEGGED, El que tiene las piernas cruzadas, instead of Patizambo. KEG, Barrica, especie de tonel, instead of cuñete or barrilito. There are also a great number of verbs, adjectives, and substantives in SEOANE'S work, which, instead of being accurately rendered by equivalents, are obscurely and often erroneously defined by periphrasis. The following examples must suffice: To IMPRECATÉ, Maldecir, instead of Imprecicar. HENPECKED, El que está gobernado por su mujer, instead of Gurrunino. INSERVICEABLE, Lo que no sirve para nada, instead of Inservible, etc., etc.

The editor does not flatter himself that his own work is perfect; but, at the same time, he feels at liberty to assert, that in many important respects it is greatly superior to its predecessors. It contains, in both languages, the exact equivalents and correspondents of the words in general use, both in their literal and metaphorical acceptations. The technical terms most frequently used in the arts, and in chemistry, botany, medicine, and natural history, as well as nautical and mercantile terms and phrases—the greater part of which, as may be seen by comparison, are not contained in other dictionaries—have been carefully selected and arranged in the present work. It also contains many Spanish words used only in those countries of America which were formerly dependencies of Spain. The irregularities of the verbs, in Spanish and English, are here, for the first time, given in full in their alphabetical order; and, in addition to this, the work also contains a grammatical synopsis of both languages, arranged for ready and convenient reference.

The pronunciation of the Castilian language is so clearly set forth in this dictionary as to render it well-nigh impossible for any person who can read English readily to fail of obtaining the true sounds of the Spanish words at sight.

As the editor has been guided in his labours, for the most part, by his own limited attainments, he has reason to fear, in a work composed of so great a variety of articles upon so extensive a diversity of matters, that he has not always succeeded in avoiding errors. Should such be found, he has no desire that they should be concealed, but will feel thankful rather to all who may assist him to correct them, for the benefit of the public, whose true interests, and no other motive, have compelled him to undertake his laborious and unappreciated task.

Quid est suavius quam bene rem gerere bono publico?—PLAUT.

MARIANO VELÁZQUEZ DE LA CADENA.

A SYNOPSIS OF THE SPANISH OR CASTILIAN LANGUAGE.

THE PARTS OF SPEECH are: the Article, the Noun (substantive and adjective), the Pronoun, the Verb, the Participle, the Adverb, the Preposition, the Conjunction, and the Interjection.

THE DEFINITE ARTICLE.

Masculine, sing. The, El: pl. The, Los.
Feminine, " " La: " " Las.

When the article el comes after de (of or from), or á (to), the e is suppressed and they are thus written; of the, del, to the, al, instead of de el, á el. No apostrophe (') is used in Spanish.

1. Agua, water; águila, eagle; alma, soul; hacha, hatchet; hambre, hunger, etc., though feminine, take the masculine article; but only in the singular, and when they are immediately preceded by it. This is merely to avoid the concurrence of two a's broadly pronounced and by no means changes the gender.

2. Common nouns taken in a general sense in English require the definite article in Spanish: as, Man is mortal, El hombre es mortal. Charity is the first of virtues, La caridad es la primera de las virtudes. But when the sense is indeterminate, they do not admit it: as, Give him bread, Dale pan.

3. Before nouns of measure, weight, or number, the English indefinite article is rendered into Spanish by the definite, and frequently omitted: as, He paid six dollars a barrel, El pagó á cinco pesos el barril, or cinco pesos barril.

4. The English definite and indefinite articles before ordinal numbers preceded by proper names, nouns in apposition, national nouns, as well as those signifying dignity, profession, trade, etc., of persons, and in exclamations, are omitted in Spanish: as, Charles the Fifth, Carlos Quinto; Madrid the capital of Spain, Madrid capital de España; He is an American, Él es americano; She is a milliner, Ella es modista; What a pity! ¡Qué lástima!

THE INDEFINITE ARTICLE.

Masculine, sing. A or an, Un. Feminine, sing. A or an, Una. The plural mos (masculine) and nas (feminine) are translated into English by the pronoun some: as, a man, un hombre; some men, unos hombres.

5. The English indefinite article coming between an adjective or a pronoun and a noun, generally is not translated; but when it is emphatical it is placed before the adjective: as, So beautiful a woman, Tan hermosa mujer, or Una mujer tan hermosa. Such a man, Tal hombre, or Un tal hombre.

THE NOUN.

Spanish Nouns have Gender, Number, and Case.

GENDER.

It is masculine or feminine. Every he, or male animal, is of the masculine gender; every she or female is of the feminine.

6. The names of inanimate objects, or of things ending in a, ad, ion (bre, when it signifies quality), are for the most part feminine; and those terminating in e, i, o, or u, are generally masculine.

7. Common nouns ending in o, change o into a to form the feminine; as, son, hijo, daughter, hija. Those terminating in an, on, or or, add a for the feminine; as, a man loiterer, un holgazán; a woman loiterer, una holgazana; patron, patrón; patroness, patrona; shepherd, pastor; shepherdess, pastora.

8. There are some nouns that express the difference of gender by a different word or termination; as, father, padre; mother, madre; poet, poeta; poetess, poetisa.

NUMBER.

Singular and Plural.

9. Nouns ending in a short, or unaccented vowel, form the plural by adding s to the singular; as, boy, muchacho; boys, muchachos.

10. Nouns terminating in a long, or accented vowel, or in any consonant, or in y, add es to form the plural; as, ruby, rubí; rubies, rubíes; captain, capitán; captains, capitanes; ox, buey; oxen, bucyes. Nouns terminating in z, change it into e, and add es; as judge, juez; judges, jueces. Papá, mamá, café, etc., are exceptions.

CASE.

11. The Nominative case expresses the subject of the verb; as, The man gives, El hombre da.

12. The Objective case direct points out the immediate object of the action of the verb; as, The man gives alms, El hombre da limosna.

13. The Objective case indirect, or complement, indicates the term, or end of the action expressed by the verb; as, The man gives alms to the poor, El hombre da limosna á los pobres (=Latin dative).

14. When the object direct of an active transitive verb is a person, a proper or personified noun, it must be preceded by the preposition á; as, A man must love man, El hombre debe amar al hombre; Isabella conquered Granada, Isabel conquistó á Granada; The miser loves no other God but his money, El avaro no ama otro Dios que á su dinero.

AUGMENTATIVE AND DIMINUTIVE NOUNS.

15. Augmentative nouns are those that increase the extent of their signification by adding on, ote, or azo to the masculine nouns, and ona, ota, or aza to the feminine, suppressing their final letter, should it be a, e, or o; as (a boy), "un muchacho," "un muchachón" (a big boy); "una muchacha" (a girl), "una muchachona" (a big girl).

16. The termination azo frequently signifies the blow or injury caused by the object to which it is added; as, látigo (whip), un latigazo (a very large whip; a stroke with a whip).

17. Diminutive nouns are formed by adding ito, illo, ico, or uelo for the masculine, and ita, illa, ica, or uela for the feminine, suppressing the final letter if it be a, o, or e; as, "un muchacho" (a boy), un muchachito, muchachillo, or muchachuelo (a little boy); "una muchacha" (a girl), una muchachita, muchachilla, or muchachuela (a little girl).

18. The terminations ito, ita, etc., added to Christian names, or those that express relationship, indicate love, affection, and regard towards the object; thus, "hermanita" (dear sister); "Juanito" (esteemed John), etc.

THE ADJECTIVE.

19. In Spanish the Adjective must agree with its noun, in Gender and Number; as, "un hombre rico" (a rich man), "una mujer rica" (a rich woman); "hombres ricos" (rich men), "mujeres ricas" (rich women).

GENDER OF ADJECTIVES.

20. Adjectives ending in o are masculine, and change it into a to form the feminine; as, rico, rica (rich). Adjectives ending in on or an add a for the feminine; as, gritón, gritona (clamorous); haragán, haragana (idle). Those ending in any other letter are common to both genders; as, "un hombre prudente" (a prudent man), "una mujer prudente" (a prudent woman).

Exception.—Adjectives ending in a consonant, and derived from the names of countries, add a to form their feminine; as, Español, Española (Spanish); Inglés, Inglésa (English); Andaluz, Andaluza (Andalusian).

NUMBER.

21. Adjectives form their plural according to the rules set forth for nouns; as, blanco, blancos (white); turquí, turquís (deep blue); natural, naturales (natural); feliz, felices (happy).

DEGREES OF SIGNIFICATION.

Adjectives have three degrees of signification, the positive, the comparative, and the superlative.

Comparatives.

Comparatives may be considered under the three divisions of the comparative of equality, the comparative of superiority, and the comparative of inferiority.

The comparative of equality with adjectives is formed with tan . . . como (as, so . . . as); as, "El es tan rico como ella" (He is as rich as she); "Ella no es tan hermosa como su hermana" (She is not so handsome as her sister).

The comparative of equality with nouns is formed with tanto, tanta . . . como (as much, so much . . . as); tantos, tantas . . . como (as many, so many . . . as); as, "Ella tiene tanto dinero como él" (She has as much money as he); "El tiene tantas casas como su hermano" (He has as many houses as his brother).

In the comparative of equality with verbs, cuanto is sometimes substituted for como: as, Tanto leo cuanto escribo (I read as much as I write).

The comparative of superiority with adjectives is formed with más . . . que (more, or the termination er . . . than); as, "El es más rico que ella" (He is richer than she); "El honor es más precioso que las riquezas" (Honour is more precious than riches).

Before nouns of number, more than is rendered by más de; as, "Ellos gastaron más de quinientos pesos" (They spent more than five hundred dollars). But if the phrase be negative, más que is used; as, "No tengo más que dos libras" (I have no more than two pounds).

The more . . . the more, with an intervening verb, is rendered by cuanto más . . . más, or cuanto más . . . tanto más; as, "Cuanto más estudia, tanto más aprende" (The more he studies, the more he learns).

The comparative of inferiority is formed with menos . . . que (less . . . than); as, "La plata es menos útil que el hierro" (Silver is less useful than iron).

Before nouns of number, less than is translated by menos de; as, "Necesito menos de tres reales" (I need less than three shillings).

The less . . . the less, with an intervening verb, is rendered by cuanto menos . . . tanto menos; as, "Cuanto menos trabaja, tanto menos gana" (The less he works, the less he gains).

SUPERLATIVES.

English superlatives ending in est, or formed by most, are rendered by prefixing the definite article to the Spanish comparative; as, "El más sabio" (the wisest); "la más ingrata" (the most ungrateful).

Superlatives in English with very are formed in Spanish by prefixing muy to the adjective, or by affixing to it the termination ísimo; as, "Muy hábil or habilísimo" (very skilful); "muy fácil or facilísimo" (very easy).

Irregular Comparatives and Superlatives.

Pos.	Comp.	Super.
Bueno,	mejor,	óptimo.
Malo,	peor,	pésimo.
Grande,	mayor,	máximo.
Pequeño,	menor,	mínimo.
Alto,	superior,	supremo.
Bajo,	inferior,	ínfimo.
Mucho,	más.
Poco,	menos.

PRONOUNS.

PERSONAL PRONOUNS.

I , yo.	We , nosotros, nosotras.
Me , me.	Us , nos, nos.
Me , mí.	Us , nosotros, nosotras.
With me , conmigo.	With us , con nosotros, as.
Thou , tú.	You , vosotros, vosotras.
Thee , te.	You , os, os.
Thee , ti.	You , vosotros, vosotras.
With thee , contigo.	With you , con vosotros, as.

You, in familiar polite style, is translated usted for both genders, and the verb agrees with it in the singular or plural, according to the sense. Usted and its plural are always written in abbreviation, thus: V. or Vd. for the first, and VV. or Vds. for the latter.

You , usted, (V.).	You , ustedes, (VV.).
You , á usted, le, la, se.	You , á VV. los, las, se.
You , á V. le, se; á él, ella, sí.	You , á VV. les, se; á ellos, ellas, sí.
With you , con V. or consigo.	With you , con VV. or consigo.

He or it , él.	They , ellos.
Him or it , le, se; él, sí.	Them , los, se; ellos, sí.
Him or it , le, se; él, sí.	Them , les, se; ellos, sí.
With him , it, con él, consigo.	With them , con ellos, consigo.

She or it , ella.	They , ellas.
Her or it , la, se; ella, sí.	Them , las, se; ellas, sí.
Her or it , le, se; ella, sí.	Them , les, se; ellas, sí.
With her , it, con ella, consigo.	With them , con ellas, consigo.

Mí, tí, sí, are always preceded by prepositions.

Me, te, se, le, los, la, las, les, are governed by verbs and never placed after prepositions.

POSSESSIVE ADJECTIVES.

My , mí, mis.	His , su, sus.	Its , su, sus.
Thy , tu, tus.	Her , su, sus.	Their , su, sus.
Your , with reference to Usted or Ustedes , su, sus.

These adjectives agree in number with the noun that follows them; as, He sold his horses (él vendió sus caballos); they fulfilled their promise (ellos cumplieron su promesa).

POSSESSIVE PRONOUNS.

Mine , mío, míos.	His , suyo, suyos.	Its , suyo, suyos.
mía, mías.	suya, suyas.	suya, suyas.
Thine , tuyo, tuyos.	Hers , suyo, suyos.	Theirs , suyo, suyos.
tuya, tuyas.	suya, suyas.	suya, suyas.
Our , nuestro, nuestros.	Your , vuestro, vuestros.	Your , de Usted.
nuestra, nuestras.	vuestra, vuestras.	de Ustedes.
Your , with reference to Usted , is also translated suyo, suyos, suya, suyas, or su, sus . . . de V. or VV.

RELATIVE AND INTERROGATIVE PRONOUNS.

Who , which , que, quien, quienes.	What , that , que.
Which , what , cual, cuales; also, el cual, los cuales, la cual, las cuales.
Whose , cuyo, cuyos, cuya, cuyas; als , de quien, de cual, etc.

DEMONSTRATIVE PRONOUNS.

This , este.	These , estos.	That , aquel.	Those , aquellos
esta.	estas.	aquella.	aquellas
That , ese.	Those , esos.	This , esto.	That , aquello.
esa.	esas.	That, eso.	It, ello, lo.

INDEFINITE PRONOUNS.

One , uno.	Such , tal.
Each , cada.	Something , algo.
Nobody , } nadie.	Nothing , nada.
ninguno.	Each one , cada cual.
Somebody , alguien.	Each other , uno y otro.
Anybody , } alguno.	One another , uno á otro.
Any , some,	Either , uno ú otro.
Some one , } alguno.	Neither , ni uno ni otro.
Somebody , } alguno.	Every one , cada uno.
Whichever , cualquiera.	Every ne ,
Whomsoever , quienquiera.	Everybody ,
	Everything ,
Both , { ambos.	todo, todos.
entrambos.	Alt , every,
ambos á dos.	It is said , dicen or se dice.

VERBS.

All Spanish verbs are classed into three conjugations. Verbs ending in ar belong to the first; those in er, to the second; and those in ir, to the third.

PASSIVE VERBS.

Passive verbs are formed from active transitive verbs by adding their participle past to the auxiliary verb ser (to be), through all its changes, as in English; thus, from the active verb amar (to love), is formed the passive verb ser amado (to be loved).

The participle must agree in gender and number with the nominative it refers to; thus, He is loved (él es amado); she is loved (ella es amada); they are loved (ellos son amados).

PRONOMINAL OR REFLEXIVE VERBS.

A pronominal or reflexive verb is conjugated by prefixing the pronouns me, te, se, V. se; nos, os, se, UV. se to the verb according to its person and number; as, he arms himself, él se arma.

In the infinitive and imperative modes the pronouns are placed after the verb, and in one word with it; the pronoun, therefore, must be suppressed, in order to find out the conjugation: thus, To approach, acercarse, (se) acercar, first conjugation.

REMARKS ON THE USE OF THE SUBJUNCTIVE MODE.

Three are the terminations of the imperfect tense subjunctive mode; ra, ría, se.—The termination ra, or se, is used when the verb is governed by a conditional conjunction, and the verb that completes the sense of the phrase is placed in the termination ría; If he had money, he would buy the house, Si él tuviera dinero, compraría la casa:—If the verb begins without a conditional conjunction, the termination ra or ría may be used, placing the verb that completes the sense in the termination se; as, It would be proper that you should write to him, Fuera or sería bueno que V. le escribiese.

Verbs signifying command, wish, supplication, etc., being in the present indicative, require the governed verb in the present subjunctive; and if they be in any of the past tenses of the indicative, the governed verb must be in the termination ra or se, of the subjunctive.

THE GERUND.

The gerund is that part of the verb that terminates in ando in verbs of the first conjugation, and in iendo in those of the second and third; as publicando (publishing), from publicar; prometiendo (promising), from prometer; asistiendo (assisting), from asistir. It admits no change for gender or number.

It is translated by the English present participle, and conjugated with the verb estar (to be); as, Anastasia is reading, and Mary Ann is playing on the piano (Anastasia está leyendo, y María Ana está tocando el piano).

PARTICIPLE.

The passive or past participle terminates in ado in the first conjugation, and in ido in the second and third. It changes its termination according to the number and gender of the person it refers to; except when it follows immediately after the verb haber, in which case it does not admit of any change.

All passive participles that do not terminate in ado or ido are called irregular; such are the following from the verbs:

To open, abrir, abierto.	To die, morir, muerto.
To cover, cubrir, cubierto.	To resolve, resolver, resuelto.
To say, decir, dicho.	To see, ver, visto.
To write, escribir, escrito.	To put, poner, puesto.
To fry, freir, frito.	To turn, volver, vuelto.
To do, hacer, hecho.
To print, imprimir, impreso.

Their compounds have the same irregularity.

VERBS THAT HAVE TWO PARTICIPLES.

There are some verbs that have two passive participles, the one regular and the other irregular. They are eighty-three in number. Such are: To bless, bendecir, bendecido, bendito; to compel, compeler, compelido, compulso; to convert, convertir, convertido, converso; to awake, despertar, despertado, despierto; to elect, elegir, elegido, electo; to express, expresar, expresado, expreso; to fix, fixar, fixado, fixo; to satiate, hartar, hartado, harto; to include, incluir, incluido, incluso; to join, juntar, juntado, junto; to arrest, prender, prendido, preso; to provide, prover, proveído, provisto; to break, romper, rompido, roto; to loosen, soltar, soltado, suelto; to suspend, suspender, suspendido, suspensado, etc.

The regular participles of these verbs are used to form the compound tenses with haber; as, He has awaked early (él ha despertado temprano).

The irregular participles are used as verbal adjectives, and with the verbs ser, etc., and do not form compound tenses with haber; excepting preso, prescrito, provisto, roto, injurto, proserito, and supreso, which have both uses; as, He is early awaked (el está despierto temprano); They have provided (ellos han provisto or proveído).

ADVERBS.

Adverbs are formed from adjectives of one termination by the addition of mente: as, dulce, dulcemente; and from those of two terminations, by adding mente to the feminine; as, gracioso, graciosamente. They admit the superlative; as, graciosísimamente.

When two or more adverbs ending in ly occur in the same sentence, the termination mente is added to the last only; as, He speaks elegantly and correctly (él habla correcta y elegantemente).

PREPOSITIONS.

The most frequent are:

At, to, for,	Á.	Towards,	hacia.
Before,	antes, ante.	Until,	hasta.
With,	con.	For, to,	para.
Against,	contra.	By, for, through,	por.
Of, from,	de.	According,	según.
From,	desde.	Without,	sin.
In, on, at,	en.	On, upon,	sobre.
Between, among,	entre.	Behind,	tras, detrás.

CONJUNCTIONS.

The principal conjunctions are:

That,	que.	Since,	pues, pues que.
Also,	también.	By, for,	por.
Moreover,	además.	Therefore,	por tanto.
And,	y, é.	Whereas,	por cuanto.
Neither, nor,	ni.	That,	para que.
Or, either, {	ó, ú, ya.	That,	para que.
Whether, {	sea que.	In order that,	á fin de.
Neither,	tampoco.	If,	si.
But,	mas, pero.	But,	sino.
Even,	aun cuando.	Provided,	con tal que.
Although, {	aunque.	Unless,	á menos de.
Because,	porque, que.		á menos que.
Why?	¿por qué?	Since,	pues, puesto
		As,	que.
		So,	como, así como
			así.

E is used instead of y when the following word begins by i or hi.—U is employed instead of ó, when the word immediately following begins by ó, or ho.

GENERAL IRREGULARITIES OF SPANISH VERBS.

EUPHONIC CHANGES.

VERBS THAT REQUIRE A CHANGE IN THEIR RADICAL LETTERS.

- Verbs ending in CAR change the c into qu when the first letter of the termination is E.
- Verbs ending in CER change the c into z
- “ “ CIR “ “ z } when the first
- “ “ GER “ “ z } letter of the
- “ “ GIR “ “ z } termination is
- “ “ QUIR “ “ z } o or A.
- “ “ GUIR drop U
- “ “ GAR add U } when the first
- “ “ ZAR change z “ c } letter of the termination is E.

THE IRREGULAR VERBS.

Irregular verbs are such as suffer some change either in their radical letters or in the terminations of the conjugations to which they belong, or in both these cases. The total number of such verbs in the Spanish language is about eight hundred and seventy-six. Of these, however, four hundred and sixty-one are compound forms. But this apparently very long list may be reduced to six classes, as follows:

- To the first class belong certain verbs like acertar, ascender, sentir, which have the vowel e in the penultimate syllable of the infinitive, and change this e when it bears the tonic accent, or is in the singular or the third person plural of the present tense (indicative, subjunctive, imperative), into ie. As a general rule, and with very rare exceptions, if in the kindred noun there is the diphthong ie, the verb is irregular of this class. Verbs of the third conjugation belonging to this class have the further peculiarity that the vowel e of the stem subsides into i when unaccented and followed by a strong termination (that is, containing a strong vowel, viz., a or o), and in the preterite (or aorist) system before a diphthong. To this class belong also the verbs adquirir, concernir (defective), and discernir.

II. To the second class belong certain verbs like acordar, mover, and dormir, which have the vowel o in the penultimate syllable of the infinitive, and change this o into ue when its bears the tonic accent or is in the singular and the third person plural of the present tense (indicative, subjunctive, and imperative). If the kindred noun has the diphthong ue, the verb generally belongs to this class. Dormir and morir (3d conj.) have ue in the same positions where sentir (class I) has i. The gerund in this class belongs uniformly to the aorist (or preterite) system.

III. To the third class belong verbs of the second and third conjugations ending in cer or cir preceded by a vowel, the irregularity consisting in their taking a z before the c when the terminations begin with a or o. This occurs in the first person singular of the present indicative, in all persons of the present subjunctive, and in those of the imperative which are formed from the subjunctive. About two hundred and eight verbs belong to this class, the forms in ecer being very numerous.

IV. This class is composed wholly of verbs of the third conjugation with the stem vowel (like pedir), and change this e for i in the gerund, in the third person (singular and plural) of the present indicative, the whole of the present subjunctive, and the imperative formed therefrom; the third persons of the past definite, and all those of the imperfect and future subjunctive.

NOTE.—The verbs which end in eir and ñir, like reir, ceñir, lose the i of their endings when it is not accented (gerund, third person past definite, and imperfect and future subjunctive), and thus is avoided the double sound of i which results; thus:

Ri { (i)endo.
—, —, (i)ó, —, —, (i)eron.
Cñ { (i)era, eras, etc.
(i)ese, eses, etc.
(i)ere, eres, etc.

V. To this class belong those verbs ending in uir in which both vowels are sounded, like argüir (excluding therefore those in guir, quir). Their irregularity consists in adding y to the stem when this is accented or followed by a strong vowel.

The preterite (aorist) stem is regular, but the initial i of the diphthongal terminations ie, io, is changed to y, since it comes between two vowels. The gerund in this class belongs always to the aorist system.

VI. To this class are assigned all the remaining irregular verbs, among which there is, however, no common principle of classification. A portion of these have aorist (preterite) systems resembling more or less closely the Latin, while the remainder are irregular in the strictest sense. These verbs are therefore given individually.

IMPERSONAL VERBS.

Impersonal verbs are those which are conjugated in the third person singular of each tense only, without expressing the nominative, as:

GRANIZAR, to hail.

It hails	graniza	It has hailed	ha granizado
It hailed	granizó	It had hailed	había granizado
It will hail	granizará	It shall have hailed	habrá granizado
Let it hail	granice	It may have hailed	haya granizado
It may hail	granice	It might, could, would, or should have hailed	hubiera granizado
It might, could, would, or should hail.	granizara		hubiera granizado
	granizara		hubiese granizado
	granizase		cuando hubiere granizado
When it shall hail	granizare	When it shall have hailed	cuando hubiere granizado

The following are some of the impersonal verbs:

To freeze	helar , irr.	To lighten	relumbrar , irr.
To glare (speaking of the dew)	escarchar	To thunder	tronar , irr.
To thaw	deshelar	To rain	llover , irr.
To drizzle	lloviznar	To happen	suced
To snow	nevar , irr.	To dawn	amanecer
To be	hacer	To become night	anochecer

DEFECTIVE VERBS.

SOLER, to accustom. Cl. II.

This verb is used only in the two following tenses:

Indic. Pres. 1 Suelo, 2 sueles, 3 suele, 2 V. suele: 1 solemos, 2 soléis, 3 suelen, 2 VV. suelen.—Imperf. 1 Solía, 2 solías, 3 solía, 2 V. solía: 1 solíamos, 2 solíais, 3 solían, 2 VV. solían.

PLACER, to please. Cl. III.

This verb is used only in the third person singular or plural, in the moods and tenses as follows: it is always accompanied by a personal pronoun in the objective case.

Indic. Pres. 1 Me place, 2 te place, 3 le place, 2 le place á V.: 1 nos place, 2 os place, 3 les place, 2 les place á VV.; or 1 Me placen, 2 te placen, etc.—Imperf. 1 Me placía, or placían, 2 te placía, or placían, etc.—Pret. 1 Me plugo, 2 te plugo, etc.: 1 me pluguieron, 2 te pluguieron, etc.—Subj. Pres. 1 Me plegue, etc.—Imperf. 1st term. Me pluguiera, etc.—3d term. Me pluguiese, etc.—Fut. Me pluguiere.

ROER, to gnaw. Cl. VI.

Indic. Pres. 1 Roo, roigo, royo, 2 roes, 3 roe: 1 roemos, 2 roéis, 3 roen.—Subj. Pres. 1 Roa, roiga, roya, 2 roas, roigas, royas, 3 roa, roiga, roya: 1 roamos, roigamos, royamos, 2 roáis, roigáis, royáis, 3 roan, roigan, royan.

REMARK.—Corroer, to corrode, makes corroe, corroen, in the present indicative, and corroa, corroan, in the subjunctive.

Obs. The verbs gustar, to like; pesar, to be sorry for; acomodar, to suit; convenir, to comport, etc., are frequently used only in the third person singular or plural, as in the verb placer. Ex.: He likes music, le gusta la música, or él gusta de la música.

A LIST OF ALL THE IRREGULAR VERBS.

Obs. 1. The compound verbs are not inserted, when they have the same irregularity as the simple ones from which they are derived: as, componer, contraponer, etc., which are conjugated like poner.

For the convenience of the learner the strictness of this principle has been departed from in the two cases following: 1st. When the simple is no longer used by itself. To this list belong these nine: cluir (Cl. V), cordar (Cl. I), ducir (Cl. III), manecer (Cl. III), stiluir (Cl. V), tribuir (Cl. V), vertir (Cl. I), blandecer, bravecer (Cl. III). 2d. Some compounds of al (reduced to a) have been included, such as asonar, atender, and asentir.

On the other hand, compounds from nominal roots, as enflaquecer, floreecer, have been inserted.

Obs. 2. The most general irregularities of the Spanish verbs consist in their taking i, j, y, or ue, or i, instead of o, or e. To find the infinitive mode of such verbs, separate the regular termination, and omit the letter or letters that do not belong to the radicals of such verbs: as in comienzo, muestras, sintió, condujeron, trajeran, construyesen, the terminations are o, as, ió, eron, eran, esen. The remaining letters are, comienz, muestr, sint, conduj, traj, construy. Add to these the regular terminations of the infinitive mode, and they will read comienzar, muestrar, sintir, conducir, trajar, construir. Take off the i, j, and y, change ue into o, and the i into e; add a c before the termination to those in ij or uj; and they will be comenzar, mostrar, sentir, conducir, traer, construir.

Obs. 3. The irregular participles are set in italics after their verbs.

The verbs of the first column are conjugated like those of the second, which must be consulted in their respective places.

A KEY TO THE PRONUNCIATION AS REPRESENTED IN THIS DICTIONARY.

SPANISH ALPHABET.

Give to the vowel the sound that the syllable that follows it in italics has in English ; and sound also, as in English, each of the syllables that represent said sound throughout all the dictionary.

VOWELS.

Pronounce a, ah ; e, ay ; i, ee ; o, oh ; u, u (in bull) ; y, ee.

The vowels have invariably the same sound, and must be fully and distinctly pronounced. The u is silent in the syllables gue, gui, que, qui, which are pronounced gay, gee, kay, kee : when the u is to be sounded, it is marked thus, ü, as in argüir (ar-goo-eer).

CONSONANTS.

NUEVO DICCIONARIO DE LAS LENGUAS ESPAÑOLA É INGLESA.

ESPAÑOL É INGLÉS—SPANISH AND ENGLISH.

A

ABA

A [ah], first letter of the alphabet in the Spanish language, has but one sound, and is pronounced as the open English a in alarm.

Á, prep. which signifies to, in, at, according to, on, by, for, and of; as Voy á Madrid, I am going to Madrid. Á la inglesa, In the English fashion. Á oriente, In the east. Jugar á los naipes, To play at cards. Á las ocho, At eight o'clock. Á ley de Castilla, According to the law of Castile. Vino á pic, He came on foot. Quien á hierro mata, á hierro muere, He who kills by the sword, dies by the sword. Dos á dos, Two by two. ¿ Á cómo vale la fanega ? Á treinta reales, For how much a bushel? for thirty reals. Este vaso huele á vino, This glass smells of wine. Real de á ocho, Piece of eight. V. REAL.—Á coalesces with the masculine article el, and instead of á el, as anciently used, al is now written, as Al rey, To the king. Al papa, To the pope. This masculine article is also used before the infinitive mood of verbs taken substantively, as Al amanecer, At the break of day. Al ir yo allá, When I was going there.—Á is equivalent to the limit or end of any place or time. Á la cosecha pagaré, I shall pay at harvest-time. Desde aquí á San Juan, From this to St. John's day. Me llegaba el agua á la garganta, The water was up to my throat.—Á sometimes signifies the motive or principle, as Á instancía de la ciudad, At the request of the city. ¿ Á qué propósito ? To what purpose?—It also serves to express distributive numbers, as Á perdiz por barba, A partridge a head.—Before the infinitive mood, and at the beginning of a sentence, it has sometimes a conditional sense, as Á decir verdad, If we must speak the truth.—This preposition governs almost all parts of speech, whether substantives, adjectives, pronouns, or verbs: Á los hombres, To men. De bueno á malo, From good to bad. Á mí, á tí, á vosotros, To me, to thee, to you. Á jugar, To play. Vamos á pasear, Let us take a walk.—It points out the person in whom the action of the verb terminates, and then is placed before the accusative or objective case, as Amo á

Pedro, I love Peter.—Á is still used in some phrases instead of por, en, sin, para, and la; and in obsolete writings for con and de.—In composition it serves to convert substantives and adjectives into verbs, as abocar from boca, ablandar from blando. Formerly it was prefixed to many words, as abajar, amatar, etc.; but being redundant, these words are now written bajar, matar, etc.—Á is frequently used adverbially, as Á deshora, Unseasonably. Á diferencia de esto, Contrary to this. Á consecuencia de eso, In consequence of that. Á la verdad, Truly. Á lo menos, At least. Á sabiendas, Knowingly. Á reces, Sometimes. Á ojos vistas, Plainly, publicly; barefacedly. Á cuestras, On the back, on the shoulders. Á escondidas, Privately, in a secret manner. Á prueba de bomba, Bomb-proof.—Á denotes the number, price, rate, manner of action, instrument, height, depth, etc., as El gasto sube á cien pesos, The expense amounts to a hundred dollars. Se hizo el seguro á tres por ciento, The insurance was effected at three per cent. El azúcar se vende á tres pesos quintal, or el, or por quintal, Sugar is sold at three dollars a quintal. Él se viste á la española, He dresses after the Spanish fashion. Pasaron el río con el agua á la cintura, They crossed the river with the water up to the waist. No le llega el vestido á la rodilla, His dress does not reach to his knees. Á fe de hombre de bien, On the faith of an honest man.

B.

B [bay]. The second letter of the Spanish alphabet: it is pronounced in the Spanish as in the English language. But in Spanish the lips only meet and are not pressed together. In this way b and v are sometimes confounded, chiefly by the illiterate; or as a reminder of an ancient spelling, the latter especially in the Castiles. The learner should make note of this peculiarity, and, not finding a word spelled with one of these consonants, look for it under the other. Thus gabilán, Mexican, is in Spain gavilán. B por b, or C por b, To know in the smallest details. B. at the end of a letter stands for besa or beso. B. stands for Blessed; *B. D.

D [day] is the fifth letter of the Spanish alphabet, and the fourth of the consonants. D has the same unvaried sound it has in English in the words dedicate, fed. In pronouncing this letter the tongue must not touch the palate at all, and but barely come in contact with the teeth. In some provinces of Spain it is wrongly sounded as th in although, and at the end of a word as th lisped in path, or as t. In Andalusia and some parts of America it is by some made silent in the termination ado, ido, and they say compráo, vendío, instead of comprado, vendido. All these faults should be carefully avoided. D is a contraction for Dón, Doña, and Doctor; DD., doctors. As a Roman numeral, D is 500.
